DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The use of the trademark VELCRO has been noted in this application. It should be capitalized wherever it appears and be accompanied by the generic terminology.

Although the use of trademarks is permissible in patent applications, the proprietary nature of the marks should be respected and every effort made to prevent their use in any manner which might adversely affect their validity as trademarks.

All of the letters in the trademark should be capitalized.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-3 and 5-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being clearly anticipated by Weightman et al., US Patent 4,741,574.

In regards to claims 1-3 and 8, Weightman et al. show a protective sleeve (10) for a vehicle shoulder safety belt (2) comprised of a generally rectilinear piece of material (20) having an outer surface (22), consisting of a "nylon or denim to quilted cloth" (Column 1, Lines 24-25), and an inner surface (24). The rectilinear piece of material is of sufficient dimensions to wrap entirely around a standard vehicle shoulder safety belt and to cover a majority of the vehicle shoulder safety belt when extended (Figure 1). A first strip of self-fastening material (34) being attached to the outer surface (22) and a second strip of self-fastening material (32) being attached to the inner surface (24). In an embodiment of Weightman et al. the fastening means (30) consists of cooperating micro hook and micro loop type fasteners, "Preferably fastener 32 has loops and fastener 34 has hooks" (Column 4, Lines 38-39). Weightman et al. also clearly state that the protective sleeve (10) may be "made with different types of fabric to suit different styles," each piece being removable at any time for washing or changing of fabrics (Column 1, Lines 40-41 and 45-46). The invention according to Weightman et al. being, "carried out with all types of fabrics, closures and padding," (Column 1, Lines 59-60). It is noted that satin is defined as "a smooth fabric, as of silk, nylon, or rayon, with a glossy face and dull back," (Webster's II Office Edition).

In regards to claims 5-7, Weightman et al. disclose an invention meeting the method limitations found in the claims.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 4 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weightman et al. in view of Finnigan, US Patent 3,957,282. Weightman et al. show all of the claimed elements except a zipper. Finnigan discloses an attachment for a vehicle shoulder harness with a soft cloth-like outer cover having a zipper (Finnigan Figure 1, Item 15) as a closure means. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to modify the invention of Weightman et al. such that it comprised a zipper as claimed in view of the teachings of Finnigan so as to provide a secure connection and to permit the sleeve "to be quickly mounted on or detached from the belt" (Finnigan Column 2, Line 68, Column 3, Line 1).
